Using energy to clear up waste

WASTE to energy company Pacific Pyrolysis says it would like to create energy from discarded nappies but until that day it will concentrate on organic waste.

Pacific Pyrolysis is seeking to raise between $2.2 million and $4 million from an initial public offer of shares and then list on the Australian Securities Exchange.

The company is developing its slow pyrolysis technology, under which organic waste is heated until it decomposes and creates a gas that can be used to produce electrical or thermal energy.

PacPyro is offering 20 million shares at 20¢ each. AAP
